Eating

Zhangjiajie cuisine is full of Tujia style and distinctive features. The signature Tujia three-pot, selected pork head, pork belly and other ingredients, with cucumbers and other vegetables, stewed over high heat, spicy and mellow, warming the body and satisfying appetite. Tujia bacon is pickled and slowly smoked with firewood, with a bright red color, salty and chewy, fat but not greasy. Rock ear stewed chicken, rare rock ear and chicken meat, the aroma of mushrooms and meat blends, the soup is delicious and nourishing. There are also refreshing sour radish and soft glutinous sugar oil cakes, every bite is the unique flavor of Zhangjiajie.

◆ Tujia Three-pot 土家三下锅

Zhangjiajie's traditional cuisine uses any three of the following as main ingredients: pork head, pork stomach, beef tendon, and crispy bones, paired with cucumbers, tomatoes and other vegetarian dishes, to make a soup-free hot pot that is spicy and refreshing.

● Tujia Bacon 土家腊肉

Zhangjiajie Tujia bacon carries the Tujia flavor. Selected Tujia wild boar meat is repeatedly kneaded and marinated with Tujia secret sauce. Then it is hung on the stove and slowly smoked with firewood. Its color is bright red and attractive, and the texture is permeated with smoke.

◆ Tujia Sausage 土家香肠

Tujia sausage is a delicacy in Zhangjiajie. Fresh Tujia pork is carefully marinated with spices such as pepper and chili pepper, and stuffed into sausage casings. Slowly smoked, the rich aroma quietly seeps in. Its color is bright red and attractive, and the skin is slightly charred.

◆ Rock Ear Stewed Chicken 岩耳炖土鸡

Rock ears are collected from cliffs and free-range chickens are raised in the mountains. They are the local delicacies of Zhangjiajie. Rock ears are tender as if they have no bones when put into the pot, and the local chickens are cut into pieces, fresh and juicy.

◆ Kuang Root Powder 葛根粉

Zhangjiajie kudzu root powder originates from wild kudzu in the mountains. After fine grinding, precipitation and purification, the powder is fine and pure. After mixing with warm water, it becomes a translucent paste. It tastes silky smooth, exudes a faint kudzu fragrance, and is sweet and refreshing.

◆ Sour Radish 酸萝卜

On the streets of Zhangjiajie, pickled radish is a unique bright spot. Selected local fresh radishes are washed and cut into pieces, and then put into a clay pot filled with special sour water. Sour water is the soul, blending chili peppers, peppercorns, rock sugar and several spices, and fermented over time. The pickled sour radish is bright in color, either white or pink. Take a bite, and the "crunch" sound is crisp, and the sour and spicy bursts in your mouth instantly, which is refreshing and spicy. Sour radish can be used as a snack to satisfy your cravings, and can also add flavor to dishes. It carries the daily life of Zhangjiajie people on the tip of their tongues.

◆ Blood tofu 血豆腐

Blood tofu is a specialty of Zhangjiajie. It is a combination of pig blood, tofu, pork, Sichuan pepper and chili pepper, and is smoked. It is tough on the outside and soft on the inside, with a strong bacon aroma, and is chewy and delicious. It is a good choice for Tujia wine accompaniment.
